FOREWORD

One of the first steps to be taken in the First Five Year Plan was the establishment of six Boards for the promotion of handicrafts, village and small industries (1) The Khadi and Village Industries Board; (2) The All-India Handicrafts Board; (3) The All-India Handloom Board; (4) The Central Silk Board; (5) The Coir Board; and (6) The Small Industries Board.

The rapid expansion of the activities of these Boards which concentrated not only on production and techniques, but also on organisation, extension, credit, marketing and export, consolidated and enlarged the position that the household industries sector had so long enjoyed in the nation's economic life. It was this fact that forced itself upon the preparations for 1961 Census and demanded that household industry should be separately investigated for a proper accounting of the nation's manpower, resources and its specific contribution to the national income. The 1961 Census therefore asked a special series of questions on household industry, input of family and hired labour, and the periods over which household industry is conducted. It was felt, however, that an enumeration of the total number of establishments and their industrial classification would be incomplete without a proper description of what they produce and how they produce. It was important to make an assessment of the limits of rigidity within which traditional skill operates. This could be obtained by studying the caste, occupational, social and economic stratifications, the limitations of credit and marketing facilities, the dominance of custom over contract, the persistence of traditional tools and design forms, the physical limitations of transport, communication and mobility, the inability to adopt new lines or adapt to changing circumstances. It was important also to make an assessment of the limits of flexibilty that traditional skill is capable of, because the transformation of traditional skills to modern skills is easier said than done and a thorough study may well reveal that it is perhaps cheaper from the social point of view to develop industrial skills from scratch than to try to graft traditional skill on alien soil. A rather tragic case of failure to make what would on the face of it seem a minor adjustment cast its heavy shadow on the nation when it was discovered that goldsmiths used to working on 22-carat gold all their lives felt sadly helpless when asked to work on 14-carat, so narrow and unadaptable were the limits of their skill and proficiency and so rudimentary the tools and equipment with which they and their forefathers had worked. This fiscal accident revealed that tools are even more important than skills.

An early opportunity was therefore taken in February 1960 to suggest to State Census Superintendents, that the Census provided a unique opportunity for conducting and documenting a survey of this kind. As such a survey was quite outside the usual terms of reference of Census work it was thought prudent cautiously to feel one's way with the thin end of the wedge of what would, it was hoped, prove to be an exciting pursuit. It was therefore considered the wiser course to wait until the State Census Offices felt so interested that they would no longer take the inquiry as an imposition but rather want to do it on their own and ask for the necessary staff and equipment. This office, too, in its turn, could make use of the interval to organise and elaborate the design of inquiry in order to feed the appetite that work in progress would serve to whet. Because it was a labour of love, sought to be unobtrusively thrust on one's colleagues and because the inquiry itself was so vast that normally it would demand in any country as big a set-up, if separately established, as the Census organisation itself and that over a much longer period, and because it was almost a pioneer venture, nothing like it having been undertaken since the 1880's, it was decided to move towards a build-up by stages, to let the inquiry unfold itself only as fast as my colleagues chose to ask for more.

Thus, in the first circular of 18 February 1960, it was suggested that the inquiry might be conducted through the agency of the Development Department, the State Director of Industries, the Director of Tribal Welfare, the Registrar of Co-operative Societies and other organistions concerned with the promotion of household industry. A draft questionnaire containing 30 questions in three parts was recommended for canvassing. It was suggested that information on this questionnaire, village by village and area by area, might either be obtained through the regular departmental channels of the State Government, or through the newly set up Census organisation, or through the hierarchy of the newly-created Panchayats. Stress was laid on the need of photographic documentation and illustration of designs, shapes and forms not only by photographs but with the help of line drawings or sketches together with a full description of the materials used.

Almost the whole of 1960 and the first half of 1961 were spent in organising and taking the census count, although several States even during this period had not allowed the grass to grow under their feet but made exploratory studies and decided in their minds how the inquiry should be organised. A series of regional conferences held in Trivandrum, Darjeeling and Srinagar in May and June 1961 revealed much enthusiasm among State Superintendents to proceed with the survey, but the need of separate staff and equipment was felt at the same time as the realization dawned that this was much too serious an inquiry to be treated casually and left to be achieved through the usual administrative channels and State Census Superintendents proceeded to augment their staff with qualified research and investigating officers, technical persons, photographers, artists, draughtsmen and other trained personnel.

This was followed by rapid progress in co-ordination between the Central and State Census offices in the matter of exchange and processing of information, documentation and investigation, of assisting each other with trained investigators and in editing and finalizing drafts, layouts, presentations.

Mention has been made of a questionnaire in three parts and thirty questions. The idea was to make a beginning with empirical, analytical studies based on a structured questionnaire which would replace general descriptive accounts that had obtained so far. The primary aim was to obtain a picture as much of the artisan himself as of his craft, to obtain a perspective of the artisan and his craft in his social and economic setting, the extent to which tradition bound him and the winds of change ruffled him, the extent of his mobility and immobility, the conditions of market, credit, new contacts and designs in which he operated, the frame of new as well as traditional producer-customer relationships in which he still worked, and how far he was ready to pierce his own caste-tribe socio-economic cocoon and make a break through to new opportunities promised by the Five Year Plans. The aim was to hold up the mirror to hereditary skills struggling with the dialectics of tradition and change.

Thus the first part of the questionnaire, purporting to be a village schedule sought to take account of the size and population of the village, its remoteness from or proximity to centres of trade and commerce, in short, the degree of isolation in which the artisan worked, and the relative strengths of various communities, in the village which would afford clues to social interdependence and the prevalence of the jajmani system. The second part was devoted to artisan communities in the village; the several castes of artisans, the number of families in each, the total number of workers, males and females, the extent of co-operative activity among them, extent of dependence upon employers and of wage or contract labour. There were questions on the raw materials used, the means of their procurement, the possible extent of dependence on others for raw materials, the extent of the material that artisans can handle within the limits of their skill. There were other questions on the exchange and flow of designs, the use of colours, the ancientness of the craft and legends associated, the colonization of the craftsman, on patrons and customers and on social and economic contact with the world inside and outside the village. There were specific questions on the workshop itself and particularly the tools and the source of supply of these tools, because it was felt that tools decide everything and are the surest index of inertness or flexibility. Separate blocks of questions were designed to bring out the ramifications of artisan castes throughout the country and the ways they sustained themselves, the type of clientele they catered for, the extent to which they operated on money or barter or service, how specialized their craft was, how wide the market, how dependent they were on their socially preordained clientele and how restricted the latter was by the seemingly unalterable laws of social custom; the extent to which they could operate in the open market, the range of their wares and the sizes to which these were ordinarily restricted either by the limits of their own skill or the length of their customer's pursestrings. Inquiries were to be made about the operation of middlemen and of co-operative societies, the people who gave new designs and demanded new products. Finally the several stages of production of the articles themselves were to be fully described including the final and finishing stage and a list of very skilled craftsmen of each community was to be furnished.

The third part was devoted specially to tribal communities and designed to find out how self-sufficient or dependent they were on the production and supply of manufactured goods, the extent to which they produced themselves or depended on others, their contacts with other communities and the specific forms of production and commerce through which these contacts were maintained.

Particular emphasis was laid on the need of obtaining as full an account as possible of unique regional design differentiations as they reflect not only the very culture patterns of the country but the persistent inventive faculties of the craftsmen. The importance was emphasised of giving full attention to articles of domestic use as it is in their shapes, designs and forms that the culture patterns and traditional skills persist most tenaciously.

Simultaneously with the investigation of specific crafts, State Superintendents proceeded to compile a comprehensive list of all types of handicrafts obtaining in their State. As for the specific Crafts to be investigated several tables were devised from the structured questionnaire in order to guide investigators towards pointed observation and analysis, to enable them to write, not just general descriptions, but with their eye on the object and on facts.

Investigations conducted between September 1961 and May 1962, including a study group of all States and the Social Studies Division in December 1961 at Delhi, stimulated many of the States into going in for a much enlarged schedule. The revised village schedule itself, the counterpart of the first part of the February 1960 schedule, contained 19 large sections containing elaborate and probing questions. The Family Schedule for practising artisan families similarly contained 19 main questions each subdivided into many questions. The Family Schedule for non-practising artisan families contained 21 questions. There were schedules for the study of co-operative societies, of production-cum-training centres, and of consumer's preference. This enlarged schedule of investigation, in the formulation of which the States themselves actively assisted, was greatly welcomed. The surveys that will appear in this series will therefore consist of two main types: (a) those based on the original short schedule and (b) those based on the much enlarged schedule. In some cases Census Superintendents felt enthused enough to scrap the work based on the original short schedule and do it over again on the enlarged schedule. In the meantime much experience was gained on the analysis of facts and figures to clothe each observation with plenty of authentic information so that the reader could make his own judgement instead of being expected to see all the time through another pair of eyes.

This programme of survey of handicrafts and household industries has been fortified by several ancillary surveys, each one of which would deserve major attention. Along with the survey a compilation has been made of all handicraft centres in each State and an inventory prepared of skilled craftsmen. Photographic and other documentation has been built up to constitute what may now be regarded as the most considerable repository in the country. Elaborate and accurate maps of craft centres in taluks, tehsils and districts are either ready or under preparation. A full census of all fairs and festivals, weekly hats and markets, throughout India, has been taken and is being publised for the first time. Andhra Pradesh has embarked upon a project of chronicling the social and religious antiquity and uniqueness of every fair and festival. A separate volume will be devoted to each district which promises to be of the utmost value to sociologists and orientalists. A full and complete inventory, replete with sketches and measurements of every object, has been prepared of exhibits in museums of tribal crafts in India. There has been a fairly satisfactory survey of houses and buildings, indigenous architectural designs and use of local building material of the whole country. All this has been entirely a labour of love, patiently organised and executed under great strain and in disregard of health and comfort, for which I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation and grateful thanks to my colleagues.

PREFACE

While the important role played by modern industries in builidng up the economy of developing countries needs no elucidation, the contribution made by indigenous arts and crafts which, besides relieving unemployment and increasing production, have been instrumental in reducing substantially over dependence on foreign imports, has by no means been small. Most of these arts and crafts have not, however, attained their full stature so far on account of a variety of reasons. The successive Five Year Plans which are being implemented since 1951, therefore, aim, among other things, to build up the small and cottage industries by providing financial, technical and other types of assistance but the achievement of this objective is dependent on the availability of comprehensive statistical data right from the source of raw material to the stage of producing finished products in respect of each craft. There is no denying the fact that surveys have been carried out in the past by various agencies and organisations on selected industries and in specific areas, but no serious attempt to collect, on an extensive basis, the data on rural crafts and cottage industries appears to have been ever made.

The 1961 Census will be remembered for a number of its distinguishing features. These include the collection of data on large, heavy, medium, small and cottage industries. The effort to probe into the industrial build up of the country was originally proposed to be confined to the information which was expected to be made available in response to the questionnaire convassed through the Houselist and Hosehold Schedule. The former was designed to collect, among other things, such of the data on our industries as the number of small and large workshops, the type of products manufactured or repaired, the average number of persons employed from day to day and the kind of fuel used. The Household Schedule was, however, confined to the collection of data relating to industries which are being run by the members of the family alone or when necessary assisted by outsiders.

It was, however, felt that the information thus obtained through these schedules would not, so far as our rural economy is concerned, yield fruitful results unless a more elaborate study was undertaken to ascertain, as observed by the Registrar General in his foreword, the social and economic setting of the artisan and his craft. From the Census point of view, it is important to assess the magnitude of cottage industries and rural arts and crafts which, if related to livelihood and population, would provide a stable and sound basis for the implementation of schemes for the development of such industries.

With this end in view, it was decided to conduct an extensive survey so as to cover every village, block, ward and mohalla of all rural and urban areas of the country. A draft questionnaire consisting of three parts and comprising thirty questions was, therefore, formulated by the Registrar General, India and circulated among the State Census Offices. It was added that the inquiry may be conducted by an appropriate organisation of the State Government, such as the departments of Community Development, Industries, Co-operation, Panchayats etc. In the event, however, of these organisations being unable for one reason or the other to undertake the proposed survey, the Census offices were advised to utilise the services of the massive organisations which they had built up for conducting the Census of 1961. Enquiries made from the various departments of the State Government which are concerned with the promotion of household industry and development of arts and crafts, however, revealed that the staff placed at their disposal was earmarked for selected areas only and that there were parts of the State territory where they did not function at all. In the circumstances, it was felt that if this elaborate survey was at all to be conducted, there was no alternative but to assign it to the Census agency which alone covered every village and town of the State. There was, however, no knowing the fact whether the Census organisation which consisted of officials drawn from different Government departments would be able to do justice to such parts of the questionnaire which needed some broad technical background on the part of the surveyor concerned. The matter was, therefore, discussed with Shri S. L. Saraf, the then Minister for Industries and Commerce, who very kindly agreed to place at our disposal the services of nineteen Extension Officers of the Industries Department for about two months. With the help of these officers, the field staff was given necessary training in advance and made to understand the implications of the questions proposed to be convassed. Each Extension Officers was allotted a separate and well defined jurisdiction consisting of 30 to 40 blocks/mohallas/wards in which he set up training camps at four or five central places, each camp being attended by the enumerators and supervisors of 8 to 10 villages/mohallas/wards.

The questionnarie of which a copy has been appended as annexure to this Report was convassed from 10th February 1961 to 1st March 1961 simultaneously along with the filling up of Census schedules. It was, however, noticed that there were certain villages where no industries nor any rural crafts existed at all and that there were a few others in which the enumerators, though trained, did not for one reason or the other collect the data envisaged in the questionnaire. In all, 4,794 villages or over 73% of the aggregate number of 6,559 inhabited villages in the State were surveyed. In addition, the survey was also conducted in 673 out of 755 blocks/mohallas/wards of 36 urban areas.

As we had already gone ahead with the collection of the data on the basis of the above questionnaire, we could not adopt the revised village schedule which though more elaborate and containing probing questions could not be filled up without instituting a fresh inquiry. Further, by the time the new schedule was drafted, the Census organisation had been dissolved and was no longer available to conduct a fresh survey.

The data collected have been tabulated in seven tables listed below :—

1. List of rural/urban crafts and number of persons employed in production
2. Distribution of artisan communities
3. Distribution of articles of rural/urban crafts by material used.
4. Designs
5. Consumption and sale
6. Cost of production, sale price and earnings
7. List of very skilled craftsmen of each community.

As the material collected was found to be of a fairly voluminous size, it could not be incorporated in a single volume as the publication would have run to over 1,200 pages and would have become an unwieldy one. It was, therefore, deemed appropriate to publish the data in two parts, one containing the statistics of arts, crafts and household indstries in rural areas and the other giving similar data in respect of the urban sector.

I am in particular indebted to Dr. B. K. Roy Burman and his organisation who went through all the tables and besides giving valuable advice on their presentation also scrutinised the data and pointed out the discrepancies.

The tabulation work was conducted under the personal supervision of Shri S. P. Arora, Tabulation Officer. I am grateful to him for the keen interest he took in the compilation of data.

The contribution made by Shri Pir Bashir Ahmed, Computor, who visited many factories and workshops to obtain clarifications on some of the entries made in schedules, has by no means been small. Other officials who were associated with the tabulation work consisted of Hakim Abdul Hamid, Shri G. A. Baigh, Shri H. U. Mailk and Shri G. M. Butt. All of them worked hard to make the compilation a success.

The proof reading was done by Shri Syed Kamal-ud-Din and Shri Abdul Aziz Teli. I appreciate the good work done by them.

24. Give the names of the designs and myths or stories behind the names, i. e. explanation of what the design stands for and the shape or decoration of objects.

25. Describe production.

(Please describe stage by stage and take photographs wherever possible. Photographs should be supplemented by pencil sketches, of surface forms, designs, shapes, colours and processes of paper if necessary for sketches of stages).

(i) First Stage

(ii) Second Stage

(iii) Third Stage

(iv) Final and finishing Stage

25. (A) Cost of production, sale price and earnings

(i) Price at which raw material is available ;

(ii) Cost of conversion into finished products ;

(iii) Usual sale price of finished goods, and

(iv) Wages earned.

26. Give a list of very skilled craftsmen of each community.

PART C VILLAGE SCHEDULE OF INDUSTRIES AND CRAFTS FOR TRIBAL COMMUNITIES SPECIALLY

27. Is this a tribe where every household produces things for its own use or the use of the community ?

28. Is this a tribe of which only particular sections produce particular things ? If so, which sections produce which things ? Mention names.	Name of Section of Tribe	Name of articles produced
29. Is this a semi-tribal community and does it produce articles for neighbouring tribes ? If so, mention the names of the tribes for which they produce and the names of articles.	Name of neighbouring Tribes	Name of articles produced for them
30. Does this tribe produce articles for non-tribal or advanced communities ? If so, mention names of these communities and the names of articles.	Names of non-tribal or advanced communities	Name of articles produced for them
