INTRODUCTORY NOTE

The question of Age is among the fundamental enquiries which the Census attempts to answer. The use of the statistics derived from it covers a wide range of subjects of economic and social significance. The age structure of the population calls for careful interpretation to provide data on which to base political, administrative and commercial decisions. It is, therefore, important that the Census information regarding age should be considered with due regard to its accuracy and reliability before such decisions are made.

A very large number of people in Pakistan have no knowledge of the correct year of their birth. A year of life is regarded by simple folk as a matter of little importance and only the vaguest idea of their age exists in the minds of many inhabitants of Pakistan. This ignorance renders the collection of Census data on this subject a matter of the greatest difficulty which is increased by the fact that the Census enumerator generally has to obtain most of the information by questioning one person, usually the head of the house-hold, who gives the information for all the other members. The enumerators may possibly see those male members of the family who are at home when he calls but is unlikely to see many of the women. Age figures given in the enumeration reports, therefore, represent in most cases the joint estimates of the enumerator and the head of the house-hold. Efforts were made to aid the accuracy of such estimates by compiling for each locality a list of important happenings with their dates. But even so most of the recorded age figures must be regarded as intelligent but rather hurried guesses. The estimates are probably correct in classing persons as children, adults or elderly people but within these wide groups accuracy is very doubtful. In general the enumerators were instructed to make every endeavour to form a good estimate in single years upto age 25 and to the nearest five years above that age.

The resulting data were chiefly sorted by hand into the wide age groups shown in this pamphlet. The sorting disclosed a great tendency for the ages reported to cluster at the years ending in "0" and, in the younger age groups where it was intended to obtain single years, there are also clusters at figures ending in "5". There appears to be a tendency for age 50 to be a favourable figure among the older people, and apparently women dislike admitting that they have passed the ages of 30 or 40 and tend to report figures just below these levels. The ages of elderly people are believed to be exaggerated and as is the common' experience in Censuses of many countries, there also appears to be a tendency to omit to report young children under 4 years of age. All these tendencies lead to heaping at chosen figures and render the grouping unreliable. In the 1931 Census of India this tendency was compensated to some extent by smoothing the the figures arithmetically before printing the tables, but on this occasion, any such artificial smoothing was felt to be undesirable.

Investigation of these crude tables also discloses what would appear to be a serious inflation of the number of persons whose ages were reported as 10 or 11 years. The high figures in these ages include a tendency to cluster at figure 10 but in certain areas accuracy appears also to be affected by other causes. Persons aged 12 years and over were to be treated as part of the Labour Force if they reported an occupation; this may have presented a temptation both to the enumerators and to the clerks who scrutinized and coded the slips to favour age 11 in cases where the occupation was doubtful or was not reported. A suspicion of some such tendency is aroused since analysis of the figures seems to indicate that the ages 10 and 11 include a proportion of persons whose ages in fact were above these figures. This inflation of the 10-11 group does not occur everywhere, but is noticeable throughout East Bengal (but is not marked in the cities) and in the Multan and Lahore Divisions of the Punjab as well as in Bahawalpur State. This is a serious defect which has its repercussions on the size of the groups right upto the age of 40. This is merely an opinion or suspicion — there has been so much movement of population that the symmetry of the age structure would in any case be distorted — but it would appear advisable to bear it in mind in interpreting the data.

In view of the importance of decisions which might be affected by a consideration of the age figures it was felt advisable not to publish them in the crude form in the regular series of Census reports. There is always a danger of data given in the published tables being extracted and used without careful study of the notes and explanations and certainly without critical research with a view to the evaluation of accuracy. It was, therefore, decided that in the regular series of the Census reports the age tables would show only such broad groupings as could be considered reasonably reliable. These groupings vary from province as follows:—

East Bengal, Punjab, N.-W.F.P: 0-9; 10-39; 40-59; 60; & over.

Sind: 0-9; 10-29; 30-39; 40-49; 50-59; 60 & over.

Baluchistan: 0-9; 10-19; 20-29; 30-39; 40-49; 50-59; 60 & over.

Federal Capital Area, Karachi: Groups seem more reliable throughout and the full range has been published in the regular reports, but above age 10 the 10-year grouping will be more reliable.

All-Pakistan tables: In view of the above these are published in the groupings 0-9; 10-39; 40-59; 60 and over.

However, in adopting this policy of broadening the age groups in the regular series of tables it was felt that the figures originally tabulated should be preserved and made available for the use of experts, students and others who could give due consideration to their evaluation. The full range of age-groups as originally compiled is, therefore, presented in this pamphlet.

It is recommended that any use made of these crude figures should be on the basis of the broadest classes which the nature of the particular enquiry permits. Where figures for smaller groups are required they should be estimated by some form of smoothing procedure, but with due regard to the fact that population movements have in many places undoubtedly disturbed the age structure.

TABLE 4.—AGE & MARITAL STATUS

1. This table analyses the total Population (excluding Non-Pakistanis) by basic age groups, main religions, sex and marital status.

2. The table is set out in small sections. The first section deals with the province as a whole and the subsequent sections give figures for each Division and District. Figures for the four larger towns are also given separately, but their populations are included in the figures for the districts, in which the towns are situated.

3. The whole table complete with all sections is repeated 5 times i. e. once for all religions and once each for Muslims, Caste Hindus, Scheduled Castes and other religions.

4. This table analyses the answers given to census question No. 2 which asked a person to state age in completed years and also marital status i. e. whether he or she was married, single (i. e. never married), widowed or divorced. The original slips were hand-sorted in 5-years age-groups in accordance with the answers recorded on them, and counted to produce the statistics shown in this table. Slips of the non-Agricultural labour force and of certain cities were however sorted and counted by punched-card machines.

5. The accuracy of the data regarding Age is affected by the uncertainty of respondents. Relatively few persons know their exact age and it was the duty of enumerators to assist them in making a reasonable estimate to the nearest five years. Even the 5-year groups contain considerable inconsistencies. There is an obvious tendency for ages to be stated in round tens. Women's ages tend to understatement and to favour numbers ending in '9'. Very young married women tend to over-state their age and there are other distorting tendencies. In these circumstances the 5-year age grouping in this Table cannot be regarded as particularly accurate. It will be noticed however that if the groups are taken in pairs, and especially in the 10-year groups 5—14, 15—24, etc., covering the periods ending the '4', the figures show a more consistent relationship from group to group.

6. This table is discussed in chapter VI of part I of the Census Report.
