NOTE

The question on Religion at the Census of 1961 was worded as follows:

Q.5(b) Religion

The instruction to the enumerator on the mode of filling the question was:

For	Hindu	write	H
	Muslim	write	M
	Christian	write	C
	Jain	write	J
	Buddhist	write	B
	Sikh	write	S

For others write the answers actually returned.

Separate statistics have been published in this paper on the six numerically important religions of India: Buddhism, Christianity, Hinduism, Jainism, Muslims and Sikhism. Other religions have been collectively presented under 'Others'. The full tables on Religion will be published in Union Table C-VII.

The statement on pages ii—vii shows the growth of the six religions and other religions taken together during 1951—61.

In consequence of the re-organisation of States and Union Territories, certain areas were transferred from one political unit to another for which tabulations by single religions were not made in 1951 or thereafter. The strength of each religion for such areas was therefore estimated for 1951 by the ratio and proportion methods. These estimates pertain to areas and populations of which the details will be available in Union Census Report Volume I Part II-A. They are, however, insignificant compared to the actual figures available for 1951.

BRIEF NOTES ON THE SIX NUMERICALLY MAJOR RELIGIONS

Buddhists

In the whole of India the number of Buddhists went up from 180,823 in 1951 to 3,250,227 in 1961. The population of Buddhists to total population was 0·05 in 1951 and 0·74 in 1961. The decadal percentage increase of Buddhists on 1951 was as much as 1,670·71.

This striking increase has been due in part to the neo-Buddhist movement which swept the country during the decade. The movement seems to have taken in its stride all states and Union Territories except Madras, Orissa and Raiasthan. The three latter States saw proportionate as well as actual decreases in the Buddhist population. The figures for Jammu and Kashmir for 1951 are not available, no census having been taken that year.

The States and Union Territories which show high increases for Buddhists are ranked below in descending order of percentage increase during 1951-61.

Christians

The movement of population among Christians has followed no consistent pattern. In some States like Gujarat and West Bengal the rate of increase has been low and much below the average for the State, and in some others, there has been absolute decline in numbers from 1951 to 1961—e.g. in Uttar Pradesh, Dadra and Nagar Haveli, Goa, Daman and Diu. The high rates in Assam, Madhya Pradesh, Orissa, Punjab, Rajasthan, Andaman and Nicobar Islands, Delhi, Himachal Pradesh, Laccadive Minicoy and Amindivi Islands, Manipur, Tripura, Nagaland and Sikkim go with modest or low rates of increase of 'Other Religions'. All other States and Union Territories suggest normal growth.

The States of high growth during 1951—61 are as follows:

States showing high increase in Christian population	Population		Percentage increase of Christians	Proportion of State's population
	1951	1961	1951—61	1951	1961

Population change in Assam, West Bengal, Tripura, Purnea District of Bihar and East Pakistan

Census Bulletin No. 2 Final Tables of Population, Sex, Rural—Urban, Religion for 1961 published by the Census Commissioner of Pakistan and Census Bulletin No. 5, Part II, East Bengal, census of Pakistan 1951, provide material to assess the movement of population among Muslims, Caste Hindus and Scheduled Castes between 1951 and 1961. Several tables are given below.

Table I gives the population of Muslims in each district and administrative division as well as in the whole of East Pakistan for 1961, the actual increase or decrease between 1951 and 1961, the percentage change during 1951—61, and the sex ratio (Muslim females per 1,000 Muslim males) in 1951 and 1961.

The large fluctuations in percentage changes as well as in the sex ratio during 1951—61 suggest considerable out-migration of Muslims from East Pakistan. They also suggest that had there been no out-migration, the decadal rate of growth among Muslims in East Pakistan would probably have been higher than 30 per cent for 1951—61. On the assumption, therefore, of a growth rate of 30 per cent for Muslims including in-migration, a column has been added in this table to show what the population might have been in 1961 at that rate. A second extra column has been added to show the excess or deficit the estimate bears on the 1961 populatoin.

Table II gives the population of Muslims in the districts of Assam, West Bengal, Tripura and one district of Bihar for 1951 and 1961. As in Table I the difference between the actual population of Muslims in 1961 observed in these States and the estimated population on an assumed rate of 27·5 per cent growth inclusive of some in-migration from other States of India of the Muslim population in those States as of 1951 has been worked out. The deficit in Table I is close to the excess in Table II.

Tables III and IV similarly work out the populations of Caste Hindus and Scheduled Castes in East Pakistan, on the assumption of a rate of growth of 25 per cent inclusive of a certain amount of in-migration from other States of India during 1951—61. Table IV works out the populations of all Hindus in Assam, West Bengal and Tripura on the assumption of 25 per cent increase. There is again a closeness between the deficit in Tables, III and IV and the excess in Table V.
