UNITED MIKIR AND NORTH CACHAR HILLS

INTRODUCING THE DISTRICT

This new district came into existence sometime after the Census was completed, having been inaugurated on 17th November, 1951. Before that the territory now comprised within this new district used to form parts of the districts of Nowgong, Sibsagar, United K. & J. Hills and Cachar. It has been formed by combining what were known as Partially Excluded Areas of Nowgong and Sibsagar (Mikir Hills Tract), Blocks I and II with an area of 603 sq. miles of the K. & J. Hills district and the North Cachar Hills subdivision of the district of Cachar. It has an area of 5891.7 sq. miles, larger than any other autonomous hill district of Assam except Lushai Hills. It is bounded on the North by Nowgong and Sibsagar, on the South by Cachar and Naga Hills, on the west by the United K. & J. Hills and Nowgong and on the East by Sibsagar and Naga Hills. This administrative district consists of two autonomous districts (i) the Mikir Hills and (ii) the N. C. Hills—these are its two sub-divisions with the H. Qs. at Diphu and Haflong. The district H. Qs. is at Diphu. Under the Constitution of India, it will have 2 Regional Councils, one each for its 2 subdivisions. They will have wide legislative and executive powers on certain matters specified in the 6th Schedule of the Constitution of India, e.g. land, unreserved forests, jhuming, social customs, inheritance of property, marriage etc. The District Council for the North Cachar Hills has already been inaugurated by the Hon'ble Chief Minister towards the end of April, '52, while the other one for the Mikir Hills subdivision also will come into force soon.

The western spurs of the Mikir Hills from Kuthari to Dabaka were situated in Nowgong, and the hills that lie south of the Mohandiju and Jamuna rivers also fell within the boundaries of that district. They rise steeply from the narrow valleys with which they are intersected, and hill and valley alike are covered with dense tree forest, except in places where they have been cleared for the shifting cultivation of the Mikir tribe. The tops of these ranges average from one to two thousand feet in height, excepting Bar Kandali, which is nearly 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. These hills support a scanty population who grow dry rice, vegetables, and cotton on their slopes. and are seldom visited by the natives of the plains.

The upper valley of the Dhansiri and of the Doiang is covered with dense tree forest which is almost entirely destitute of population. A wonderful view of this forest can be obtained from one of the outer ranges of the Naga Hills. North, east and west, as far as the eye can reach, there is nothing but a pathless wilderness of trees. In the far distance on the north, the blue ranges of the Mikir Hills can be discerned some twenty-five miles away, but on the east and west there is forest et proeterea nihil. They consist of a mass of sharply serrated ridges, whose steeply sloping sides are green with creeper—smothered trees and the bamboo jungle that springs up on the sites of following jhums. The outer ranges are not more than 1,500 feet in height, but further back there are hills whose summits are 4,000 feet and more above the level of the sea. Dotted about amongst these forests are to be found the villages of the Mikirs, villages that sometimes consist of but one or two huge houses, each of which accommodates a family of truly patriarchal proportions. Of all the tribes upon the north-east frontier, the Mikirs are probably the most amenable to law and order.

North Cachar Hills Subdivision—With the exception of an insignificant tract of level land in the angle formed by the junction of the Kapili and the Doiang, the whole of the North Cachar Hills subdivision which covers an area of 1890'8 sq. miles is hilly country. From the Jaintia Hills to a point a little to the west of Asalu, the Barail or 'great dyke', runs almost due east and west across the district, and forms a continuous wall of mountains, gradually increasing in height towards the east. Kalangtam, where the range enters Cachar, is 4,336 feet above the level of the sea ; the next important peak is Jentahajuma (5,127), while Sherfaisip, a little to the north, is 5,617 feet. To the south-east of Haflong there are three peaks over 5,700 feet in height. Here the range takes a sharp turn towards the north, and reaches its greatest elevation at Hampeopet (6,153 feet), but from this point it gradually declines in height, and at Laikek, a little before it enters the district of he Naga Hills, it is only 2,628 feet above sea-level. Almost the whole of the area north of the Barail is a mass of hilly country. The general tendency of these hills is to run north and south, but there are only two well-defined ranges, and few summits above 3,000 feet in height. Except on the west, these hills take the form of serrated ridges, which rise sharply from the streams which hurry down the valleys at their feet. In their natural state they are covered with dense tree forest, and this is the condition in which the summits still remain. The lower slopes have generally been cleared for the shifting cultivation of the hill-men, and during the interval of the rest that is allowed between each period of cultivation are covered with a dense growth of high grass jungle and bamboo. South of the Barail there is a belt of hilly country containing several ranges of some importance with a general trend from north-east to south-west. On the west of the Jatinga river there is a short range with one peak, Damcharabaju, over 8,000 feet in height ; while the hills on the eastern side of that river rise to an altitude of 4,402 feet at Upulia, and 3,634 feet at Nemotha.

The Jatinga river is well known as the hill section of the Assam Railway has been carried up its valley. It rises south of Haflong and flows west and south through the hills till it debouches on the plain at Panighat. From here it flows through the Barkhala pargana of Cachar and after receiving the Doloo on its left bank, falls into the Barak nearly opposite Jaynagar, after a course of 36 miles. West of the Jatinga there are numerous small streams which drain the country south of the Barail, but are of little importance except as drainage channels. North of the Barail the principal drainage channel is the Doiang, which rises near the Mahur station and flows a tortuous course through the centre of the subdivision. From its junction with the Langpher river near Lamsakhang it forms the northern boundary of the subdivision till it falls into the Kapili, which for the greater parts of its course acts as the western boundary of the North Cachar Hills. The principal tributaries of the Doiang are, on the left bank the Dalaima , the Larglai, and the Langyen. On the right bank it is joined by the Mahur, with its tributary the Mupa, and the Langting. During their passage to the plains these rivers present the phenomena usually observed in hill streams. The channel is full of rocks and boulders, which, in conjunction with the rapidity of the current, render them useless for the purposes of navigation. The rivers roar their way towards the lower levels, but, though they add much to the charm of the surrounding scenery, and carry off the rainfall of the hills, they do not as yet contribute anything towards the material development of the country.

Mineral Deposits : Lime is found on a tributary of the Langting to the north-east of Maibang station. The rocks here are shales dipping at 20° to the NNW, and the stream has deposited a bed of calcareous tufa on the upturned edges of the shales. The deposit is of small extent and has nowhere a greater thickness than two feet. Similar deposits have been found in the valleys near Gunjong. Outcrops of limestone are also reported to be seen in the country between the Doiang and Kapili, in the valleys of the Amram and Langyam streams, and at Sinkilangso, Langhuha and other places. Neither coal nor iron is worked in these hills, Ratnfall : The average annual rainfall at Silchar is 121 inches, but near the foot of Assam Range it is not far short of 170. The storm clouds sweeping up the valley of the Barak are, however, stopped by the Barail, and it is on its southern slopes that most of this aqueous vapour is precipitated in the form of rain. At Haflong, immediately to the north of this wall of hills, there are but 77 inches in the year, and at Maibang the annual fall is as little as 55 inches. November to February are the only four months in the year that can be considered dry, as the spring rains are unusually heavy. Mikir Hills subdivision is very malarious and unhealthy.

Earthquake : North Cachar Hills subdivision suffered considerable damage by the shock which occurred on January 10, 1869. This earthquake was felt in Upper Burma, and as far to the west and south as Patna and Hazaribagh, over a total area of some 2·5 lakh square miles ; but Manipur and the eastern end of the Surma Valley where the places that suffered most severely from this visitation. Dr. Oldham, who enquired into the circumstances of this earthquake, was of opinion that the shock probably originated in a fissure about 20 miles long, situated at a considerable depth below the surface on the northern border of the Jaintia Hills. The great earthquake of June 12th, 1897, was felt over an area of 1·75 million square miles while the area over which it is known to have done serious damage to masonry building was not less than 1,45,000 square miles. North Cachar Hills escaped with comparatively little injury. The residence of the Subdivisional Officer and the Dak Bungalow at Haflong were rendered uninhabitable. Little damage was done to the unopened section of the railway in the North Cachar Hills, but the bridges between Badarpur and Silchar sustained serious injuries.

Total		... 6,46,489 acres or 1,010 sq. miles.

In addition to the area under Reserved Forests, the tract bears an extensive area of Unclassed State Forests. The latter area is forests in name only on account of the fact that unrestricted jhumming has virtually eaten up all tree forests bearing the whole area invaded by bamboos and grasses with a few scattered trees here and there.

The tract is almost entirely hilly mostly made up of metamorphia rocks with a fringe of cretaceous and tertiary deposits on the south and east. Dhansiri, Disama and Daldali Reserves have tertiary beds, alternately of sand stones and shales with an intrusion of granite, as near Silbheta in the Disama Reserves, through which the Jamuna river cuts a beautiful gorge. There is a good deposit of limestone in Disama Reserve, wherein occur thin coalseams and beds of gypsiferous shale. Below the tertiary rocks, there is a thin occurrence of cretaceous rocks with coalseams and shales. The metamorphic rocks are mostly gneiss and some schists and quartzites, and there are occasional intrusions of granite. The gneiss is composed mostly of quartz felspar with magnetite, hornblende, and mica. In Dhansiri Reserve numerous fossils of wood are found in the cuttings and river beds. One of them was identified as Glutoxylum assamica.

The forest is chiefly of miscellaneous type—major portion dry except in the valleys which bear wet type of forests with Ontenga (Dillema Indica) as principal species. A lot of Ajhar also is found. Sal occurs in small patches only in the Chalabor, Sildharampur, Jungthung and Rongkhong Reserves, but of poor quality and of smaller size classes. It appears that the area under Sal was more extensive in the past, but due to wanton destructions by jhumming and burning it has been reduced to the present state. Condition of regeneration is good in many places.

Important species, other than Sal, from utilisation point of view are Gomarai, Sam, Sonaru, Amari, Poma, Bogapoma, Bhelu, Bola, Gonseroi, Nagabhe, Sidha, Sopa and some others.

Most of the timber species are utilised in the Nowgong district locally for constructional purposes, by the public as well as Government Departments. The demand for small timber in the form of posts is very high ; Sonaru is prized much for this purpose and Sal follows it closely. Demand for firewood is also very keen and with further development of means of extraction a good quantity of it will find its way to market.

Some of the reserves, Langting-Mupa for example, are very rich in bamboos and Bhelu trees, providing exeellent raw material for the manufacture of paper and such reserves have a good future from this point of view.

Lac is a special produce of immense importance grown by the Mikirs fetching a revenue in the form of royalty of Rs. 1,00,254 (14,563 mds. and 3 srs.) in 1950-51, (Rs. 74,178) 11,314 mds. and 1 sr.) on average for the last 5 years and Government have under contemplation to establish a Shellac factory shortly at Chaparmukh.

The reserves of the new district are still undeveloped and the needs of the time are to open means of communications for exploitation of the resources and restocking of the areas depleted by wanton jhumming.

HISTORY

The Kacharis of North Cachar or Dimasa as they call themselves are generally supposed to be a section of the great Bodo horde. This populous and powerful race is said to have had its origin somewhere between the upper waters of the Yang-tse-kiang and the Hoang-ho, and to have spread in successive waves over Assam. At one time they travelled as far as Gauhati, whence they finally settled at Dimapur. When the Ahoms entered the Assam Valley in 1228 A. D., the Dimasa occupied the western part of Sibsagar and a considerable part of Nowgong, in addition to the valleys of the Kapili and the Dhansiri. Inevitably, hostilities frequently occurred between the two races. In the first collision said to have taken place in 1490, the Kacharis were victorious, but were repulsed in 1524 by the Ahoms when they raided the Ahom territory. By 1536, the Kacharis were shorn of all their possessions in the valley of the Dhansiri and north of the Kalang in Nowgong and were compelled to abandon Dimapur and fall back on Maibong on the Mahur river in the hope that the Ahoms would be unable to follow them. Maibong too was taken and sacked through the jungle-covered hills to their new abode. The remains of brick ruins, rock sculptures, and dense groves of bamboo show that Maibong must once have been a thriving place; but the Kachari Raja was wrong in supposing that he had passed beyond the pale of the Ahom might and influence by the Ahom ruler Rudra Sing in 1706. The Kachari Raja therefore fled to Cachar Plains and settled at Khaspur by about 1750 A.D., probably in the reign of Dharmadwaj or Kartik Chandra. Little is known of the history of the Kacharis during the 18th century. The Kachari Raja seems in fact to have sunk to the position of the petty ruler of an unimportant tribe, living in a remote and jungly tract. The next important historical event was the formal conversion of the Raja Krishna Chandra to Hinduism in 1790 A. D., whose example was followed by his people and nearly all the Kacharis in the subdivision now describe themselves as Hindus. In 1809, Krishna Chandra allowed himself to be entangled in the web of intrigue that has always surrounded the throne of Manipur with results that were fatal to his own small principality. As a result of his entanglement, Cachar was invaded by Manipur forces in 1818. In the meantime, the Burmese who had driven away the Ruler of Manipur expressed the intention of adding Cachar to their dominions. The British Government who were unwilling to see a powerful nation establishing its reign right up to the frontiers of Sylhet, turned to Gobind Chandra, expelled the Burmese and seated him once more into the throne on a payment of an annual tribute. He took up his abode at Haritikar, but in 1830 was assassinated by the orders of the Manipuri Raja Gambhir Sing. In the absence of natural heirs his territory lapsed to the British under the terms of an agreement executed in 1826. The subdivision along with the rest of the district of Cachar of which it formed a part was formally annexed by proclamation on August 14, 1832.

Archaeology : At Maibong, there are ruins which are probably the remains of the Palace of the Kachari Raja. There are also some 15 rocks sculpture in an indifferent state of preservation. A solid rock, the size of a small cottage, has been curbed into the outward seeming of a house. There is a rock-cut temple and two inscribed stones at Maibong. Some stone images and carving have also been discovered at Maibong. Some of them are brought to Haflong and kept in the S. D. O.'s Court. But a large collection of such stone images are said to have been taken away by the former Assam Bengal Railway authorities to Chittagong. These are the relics of the Cachar Kings of the 16th century A. D. Besides these, there are 4 monotholic groups at Derabra, Boloson, Khartan and Kobak in this subdivision. These are said to be the ruins of th Khasis who inhabited this part of the country before the Kacharis. The rock-cut temple, 2 inscribed stones and the 4 monotholic groups are protected monuments under The Ancient Monument Preservation Act, 1893.

THE MIKIRS.

According to Colonel Dalton, the Mikirs were originally settled in the North Cachar Hills but were driven westward into Jaintia territory by the Kacharis. Dissatisfied with the reception accorded to them there, they sent an embassy to the Ahom Governor at Raha, offering to place themselves under the protection of his master, but, as the luckless delegates were unable to make themselves understood, they were forthwith buried alive in a tank which that officer happened to be excavating. Hostilities ensued, but the Mikirs were soon suppressed. and were settled in the hills that bear their name, though a considerable colony are still to be found in south Kamrup and the northern slopes of the Khasi Hills. They are divided into four tribes Chintong, Ronghang, Amri and Dumrali, and these tribes are again subdivided into various exogamous groups. In the hills the Mikirs live by jhum or shifting cultivation, and raise crops of cotton, chillies, rice and vegetables. All the members of a family live in one house, which is thus of considerable size.

Among the tribes of the Mikirs, Chintong and Ronghang rank rather higher than Amri because Amri excused itself from sending a man on the dangerous embassage to the Ahom king in Sibsagar, when a representative was required from each tribe. Hence Amri is excluded from sharing the liquor at a sacrifice and rather looked down upon by the western Mikirs especially. Dumrali acted as interpreters to the embassy at the Ahom kings. Hence we may presume that they had been settled in the Assam Valley for some time.

Mode of Life : In their own hills the Mikirs cultivate cotton and summer rice in forest clearings made mostly on the slopes of the hills. Their implement is the hoe, cattle are not kept, and milk is regarded as impure. In the plains, however, they gave up this prejudice and learn to cultivate winter rice with the plough. A Mikir village or chang (so called from the high platforms on which the houses are raised ten or twleve feet above the ground) consists of simple houses or disconnected groups scattered about the jungle and constantly liable to change as their inhabitants shift their dwellings in search of fresh lands. Usually all the members of a family, however numerous, occupy a single house, which may thus be of very respectable size. The houses are very strongly put together. Under the platforms live the pigs and fowls.

Religion, Funeral Rites and Marriage : The principal deity is Arnam Kethe. i.e., the great god, whom the western Mikirs are said to call Hujai, but this word may simply be the name of a district (Hozai), or may be connected with the Bodo hajo, a hill. His victim is usually a pig. The sacrificial ground is a cleared space near every village, and the principal times for worship are the first days of Magh, Baisakh and Kartik. The ground is swept clean and spread with leaves of wild plantain and wild cardamum (tora), upon which are placed the offerings of flowers and whole and ground rice. The pig is then introduced to Arnam Kethe, by the medicineman (se kara kli), who addresses the god in words to this effect : "We have come here to offer to you all the things you see, and we hope in return that you will keep us safe." The blood and some of the cooked food are offered to the god before the company eat. Once a year at least all the people of a chang meet together for this solemnity, which they call Rongker. But propitiatory offerings have constantly to be made by individuals to various evil spirits. They are demons of the higher hills, of the streams, and even of large bils, or collections of water, and some are household devils, as Mukrang and Peng, who are worshipped indoors by the family once or twice a month by way of disarming their malice. The list may be increased at any time by the discovery of new devils. In the case of sickness, meeting a tiger, or any other mischance the medicineman is called upon to divine the particular devil in fault, who is thenceforth propitiated by his new worshipper with yearly offerings of a fowl or goat.

Mikirs burn their dead. The funeral service is held either at the time or afterwards over the burnt bones, and consists in the offering of a victim to the spirit of the departed, followed by drinking, singing and dancing, often kept up for several nights in succession. Those who can afford it set up an upright stone (long-e) as a memorial of the deceased, with a flat horizontal stone (long pat) before it, to serve as a table for the offerings of rice occasionally supplied as food to the dead man.

Mikirs never marry before maturity. Polygamy is permitted if a man can afford it ; on the other hand, a man too poor to support a wife is not supposed to marry at all. Betrothals by the parents seem to be unknown. If a man takes a fancy to a girl he calls on her parents with a present of rice-beer, and if approved of by the young woman he wins her by serving in her father's house for a term agreed on—usually two years—after which he carries off his bride to his own home. Social intercourse between the sexes is entirely unrestrained and the women take an equal part in all the occupations, ceremonies and diversions of the men.

THE KACHARIS

Physical appearance ; Food and Dress : The Kacharis are certainly not a tall or handsome race, and in general appearance bear some resemblance to the Nepali, being as a rule shorter and stouter than the people of North-West India, though well fitted to bear up against physical fatigue and hardship. In face and figure they show a distinct approximation to the Mongolian type, i.e., they have square set faces, projecting cheek-bones, with almond-shaped eyes, and scanty beard and moustache, the last-mentioned being often wanting altogether. In this way they are well fitted for all forms of outdoor (field and factory) labour that require strength rather than skill, and may very reasonably be regarded as the 'navvies' of Assam.

Food and Dress : As regards his food, the Kachari is as a rule by no means limited and restricted, like his Hindu and Muslim neighbours. On the contrary, he enjoys and practises a freedom in this respect which no doubt goes far to account for his good physique. With the exception of beef he denies himself almost nothing. His great delicacy is pork ; and a Kachari village usually swarms with pigs in almost every possible stage of growth. These animals are often exposed for sale at fairs and markets in the Kachari country. There is, however, one common article of food, which no orthodox old-fashioned Kachari will ever touch, i.e. milk. Among other delicacies of the plain Kachari is what is known as dried fish (na-gran), i. e., the very small fish left on the surface of inundated land after the water has subsided. This small fish is not cured or prepared in any way, but simply dried in the sun ; and is very far from being attractive to the eye or the nose, especially to the latter. The Kachari often varies his diet by adding to it the proceeds of the chase and by fishing in the numerous shallow hill-streams in which his country abounds. The favourite beverage is a kind of rice-beer known as Madh or Zu prepared by steeping rice in water for two or three days, at the end of which time it is boiled with the addition of certain condiments and drunk straight from the kalsi, while still warm. It is not an inviting drink to the eye, as it is a thick greyish-looking fluid, but it is not unpleasant to the palate, having a slightly sub-acid taste. It is not very intoxicating.

Men wear a waist cloth, shawl and turban ; women wear a petticoat reaching from the waist to the knee and another cloth to cover the upper portion of the body. In their mode of dress the Kacharis do not differ materially from their Hindu neighbours, but they show a certain fondness for coloured garments, and are acquainted with the art of dyeing, the materials for preparing the dyes (usually blue and various shades of red) being supplied generally from the leaves or roots of trees.

Village and Houses : The Kacharis generally live in the Valleys that intersect the hills. A Kachari village is as a rule much more compact than a Hindu one, the houses being built more closely together. Usually too there is comparatively little foliage in the way of trees, and occassionally even something like a street separates the two or more lines of houses which compose a village. In the centre there is the youngmen's club or nodrang, which is so common a feature of the villages of the hill tribes of Assam. Each house, with its granary and other buildings, surrounded by a ditch and fence, the latter usually made of ekra reeds, jungle grass or split bamoo, etc. The ditch, some 3 or 4 feet in depth, surrounds the whole homestead, the earth taken from it being thrown up on the inner side and on the earthworks, some 2 or 3 feet in height, so thrown up are firmly inserted the reeds or split bamboo work forming the fence itself, this latter often inclining outward at a very obtuse angle, so that the ditch and fence are not easily surmounted from outside by would-be intruders. A Kachari village usually abounds in domestic livestock of various kinds, e, g. ducks, fowls, goats, pigs, cattle, etc. With the abundance of livestock, especially hogs, reared and kept by the Kacharis, their villages can scarcely be described as clean. The houses are of the usual type, one storeyed only, the walls being of ekra reeds or split bamboo with wooden posts and the roof of thatch fastened by cane. They are built on the ground and are divided into three compartments. Some houses have a small earthen plinth if the site is not level and this may be either stone or plank or faced with wood. Stones are used as seats.

Religion : The religion of the Kachari race is distinctly of the type commonly known as animistic and its underlying principle is one of fear or dread. They seem to have no clear idea of the existence of any one Supreme Being. The Kacharis believe in the existence and active interference in the affairs of men of certain invisible spiritual beings who are the authors of sickness, famine, earthquakes, etc., and who are, for the most part, influenced by malevolent motives, and whose ill will towards mankind must be propitiated and bought off by frequent offerings of rice, plantain, pigs goats, poultry, etc. There is no formally appointed priestly caste, though there is an approximation to one in the persons of the Deoris who invariably take the lead in all religious ceremonies. Their offices do not seem to be hereditary and anyone versed in the usual forms of exorcism, etc., can discharge it, nor are they treated with any great respect and, as a rule, they are celibates. Another class of persons employed in religious ceremonies is known as the Ojha who is generally armed with shells, cowries, etc. by the manipulation of which he professes to be able to foretell prosperity or the reverse to those who consult him. These officials are supposed to be competent to deal with the ordinary ailments of village life by indicating the approximate method of propitiating the offended deity, Modai, whose anger is held to be the cause of all the ills that flesh is heir to. But in times of special emergency, e. g. plague, pestilence, famine, etc., the services of the 'possessed women', the Deodani, are called into action for a special puja organized on a somewhat large scale. Ancestor-worship is not in vogue to any extent among the Kacharis. The worship of natural forces also would seem to be not at all common. The Kachari Pantheon is a very extensive one, though it seems probable that only a comparatively small number are strictly of tribal or national origin, many having obviously been borrowed from their Hindu neighbours. Of the household gods by far the most important is Bathau who is pre-eminently the guardian of the family interests and family honour. He is never represented in idol form, but is well in evidence through his living symbol the Siju tree. Only second to Bathau is his consort, Mainao, though, unlike her husband, she has no special emblem visible to the human eye. Her special function is that of "Guardian of the rice fields" and among a purely agricultural community like that of the Kacharis, she is of course, held in very high regard. There are other deities bearing various names.

Marriage:—Marriage by capture was largely, if not universally, in vogue among the Kacharis in earliest days. In modern times it has rapidly passed out of vogue. The young people occasionally take the matter into their own hands ignoring the wishes of their parents on either side. This procedure is looked upon by the community as blameworthy and irregular but not invalid. The bride's parents claim an immediate payment and also exact the brides's price at a higher rate than usual. The more usual practice is as follows. When a young man reaches a marriageable age, his parents exert themselves to find a suitable wife for him. Having made their choice, they usually commence operations by making presents of tamul pan, pigs and the inevitable madh to the father and mother of the bride-elect. A favourable reception of these overtures is indicated by the formal cutting asunder and eating a betel-nut by the contracting parties, after which ceremony the young people are assumed to be engaged to each other. Thereafter the respective parents at once proceed to settle the amount of the bride-price, Gadhan, which is always paid by the bridegroom's family to the parents of the bride, which need not be paid at once. The marriage itself is not consummated for some months afterwards and the ceremony is always marked by a great feast and merry-making, during which there is a very liberal consumption of madh, pork, rice etc. Where the bridegroom's party is unable to pay the bride-price, it is the common practice for the bridegroom to give the equivalent in personal service in the house of the bride's parents.

Disposal of the dead:—There are two recognized ways of disposing of the dead, i. e. burial and cremation. The latter is looked upon as the more correct and respectable, though from motives of economy the former is by far the more common.

When a man dies his neighbours and relations enter his house and his widow or, if he had no widow, some old woman kills a cock (for a woman a hen) at the head of the deceased. She then says, "father and mother who have died, take your child away," Then the corpse, which has been washed is carried to a stream near the village and placed on a pyre of 12 layers of wood, and is burnt, the head to the west. The ashes are then thrown into the stream, and the people go back to the house. The widow, or old woman, puts a piece of gold or silver into a little bowl of water and with a leaf sprinkles those assembled one by one saying—"I have sprinkled, Go." Clean clothes are then put on. In the evening, if there is any rice in the house, the married youths and maidens collect wood and leaves and the rice is spread on mat and pounded. A little is distributed to each house in the village where it is cooked ; next day it is brought back to the house of the deceased. When all are assembled pigs, goats, cocks, hens and tortoises are killed, and a feast follows. The next day all go to where the corpse was burnt and scatter rice ; then they go back to the house and get water which they sprinkle on the burnt-out pyre after which they return to the house of the deceased, where drink is supplied.

The married men then proceed to build a model house outside the village. The house is about 2½ feet high including the comparatively tall chung. There is a knotched stick up to the little verandah, by way of a ladder, and at the foot there is a little dugout. On the verandah is a small wooden seat and often a cloth. Several scarlet and black woollen squares are hung from the roof to frighten away evil spirits.

The Kacharis have some idea, however vague and unsatisfactory, of a life prolonged after death, though his notion of the future life is merely that of the 'first earthly life renewed.'

Social and Domestic Customs :—The social and domestic life of the average Kachari ryot is of a very simple, primitive, and patriarchal character, with several pleasing features. The relations of sexes are on the whole a very sound and wholesome character, far more so probably than in many countries boasting of a higher civilization. Infant marriage is as yet unknown among them and the young people are, as a rule, chaste before marriage and true to their marriage vows in after-life. The tie between parent and child is often one of strong affection, but the sons of the household are as a rule more enterprising than the same class among Hindus and are apt to leave the family fold to push their fortunes elsewhere. As a rule the Kacharis are a strictly monogamous race, the cases of men having two wives being almost invariably limited to men of a somewhat higher social position or great wealth, such as Manzadars, Mandals, etc. Polyandry is absolutely prohibited. Children, more specially orphans, are occasionally adopted, usually by near relatives, but somtimes by absolute strangers. In such cases the children so adopted are treated as full members of the family. Divorce sometimes takes place by mutual consent, but it cannot be effected without a certain formality. Man and wife appear before the village elders and state their case, concluding by tearing a pan leaf into two pieces, a symbolic act indicating that as the sundered leaf can never re-unite, so their married life is severed for ever.

Disputes, whether matrimonial or otherwise (for example, inheritance of property, etc), are almost invariably referred to the council of village elders whose members are not necessarily limited to 5 or other definite number ; and the decision of this rural council is very rarely questioned or opposed in any way.

Among the Kachari women do not occupy quite the same influential position as seems to be enjoyed by their sisters in the Khasi Hills, where something like a matriarchate apparently holds the field of social and domestic life. Still the position of the wife and mother is far from being a degraded one. The Kachari husband and householder has neither sympathy with, nor tolerance for, that degrading and demoralising creed which says that "woman is but dust, a soul-less toy for tyrant's lust". on the contrary, he usually treats his wife with distinct respect, and regards her as an equal and a companion to an extent which ran hardly be said to be the rule among many of the Indian peoples. Kachari women, both in early life and as matrons, enjoy a large measure of freedom, a freedon which is very rarely abused for evil purposes. The Kacharis have many remarkable virtues of great price, i. e , honesty, truthfulness, straightforwardness and a general trustworthiness deserving of all honour.

Occupations : They begin and end with agriculture, nearly 95% of the people depending on it, One of their chief industries is the culture of silk-worm known as eri and the manufacture of eri cloth.

POPULATION

The population of the district is 165,444 against 133,402 in 1941, giving a tota variation of 32,038 for the present decade against the nominal variation of 100,558 in the previous one. This is the smallest population among the autonomous districts of Assam, the actual population of the district now constituted will be larger than this figure, as the district authorities could not possibly anticipate some of the boundary adjustments made by the Mikir Hills Boundary Commission and notified by Assam Gazette Notification No. TAD/R/31/50/151 of 13th April, 1851. The district itself came into existence only on November 17, 1951, (vide notifications Nos. AB/R/31/50/190 d/- the 27-8-51 and TAD/R/31/50/204 d/- the 3-11-52) its figures were therefore still shown under the parent districts of Cachar, Sibsagar, Nowgong and United K. & J. Hills. The Registrar General, however, considered it advisable to separate the available figures for the figures from the parent districts and to consolidate them under the present district. The total population of this new district is the smallest amongst the autonomous districts of Assam and will probably remain so even if full boundary adjustments are taken into consideration. It has increased at the nominal percentage rate of 24.02 during the past decade but the actual rate will be much smaller as its population contains 22,544 persons inhabiting Blocks I and II of Jowai Subdivision without any corresponding adjustment of the 1941 figures. A similar explanation applies to its nominally enormous increase of 306.17% for the previous decade. This is due to taking into account the population of 96,041 of the Mikir Hills Tract for the first time in 1941 without adjustment of the 1931 figure. The new district is constituted with the Mikir Hills Excluded Areas of Nowgong and Sibsagar as the nucleus to which the North Cachar Hills subdivision of the old Cachar district and Blocks I and II of Jowai subdivision are added. North Cachar Hills subdivision of this new district shows a percentage increase of only 6.2 against only half the rate attained by it in the previous decade. The population of Mikir Hills subdivision stands at 125,777 against 96,041 of 1941 i.e., an increase of 31% which includes 23.5% due simply to the inclusion of Jowai area. Thus the actual percentage increase will be hardly 7.5. The density of the Mikir Hills is 28, an increase of 6 persons per square mile over the 1941 figure. If we ignore the N.E.F.A. areas, it has the lowest density figure among the autonomous districts of Assam excepting the Lushai Hills which is by far the most thinly populated district. Being a newly constituted district I have no authoritative accounts of its public health or economic history excepting that for North Cachar Hills subdivision. However, the very raison de tre for the creation of the new district is to bring about an improvement in the conditions of the Mikir Hills people who inhabit them, who are among the most backward hill people in the State. The public health is far from satisfactory, the area is extremely inadequately served by medical and educational facilities and the climate is malarious and unhealthy. The creation of the new district is bound to a fillip to the advancement of the principal hill tribes e. g. the Mikirs, the Kacharis etc. inhabiting it.

INTRODUCING THE STATISTICS

In the past, village statistics for each district used to be printed after the Census, giving the population of each village and showing the distribution of communities and of literate persons. In view of the importance of the 1951 Census, at which in addition to the usual population data, valuable information was collected concerning the social and economic life of the people, it was decided to publish a District Census Handbook containing the more important Census abstracts and tables.

The Primary Census Abstract gives the details of each village by the 8 Livelihood Classes. There are five general population tables of the 'A' Series, three economic tables of the 'B' Series, five household and age (Sample) tables of the 'C' Series, seven social and cultural tables of the 'D' Series and one table 'E' giving summary figures for the district and tahsils. As far as possible, these tables furnish district data with break-up for Census tracts within the district.

At the 1951 Census, the economic classification was substituted for the classification based on religion. The people have been divided into two broad livelihood categories, namely, the agricultural classes and the non-agricultural classes. There are four agricultural classes defined as below :—

I. Cultivators of land wholly or mainly owned and their dependants.

II. Cultivators of land wholly or mainly un-owned and their dependants.

III. Cultivating labourers and their dependants.

IV. Non-cultivating owners of land, agricultural rent receivers and their dependants.

There are similarly four non-agricultural classes defined as persons including dependants who derive their principal means of livelihood from :—

V. Production other than cultivation.

VI. Commerce

VII. Transport

VIII. Other services and miscellaneous sources.

The above eight classes have been referred to as livelihood classes.

Each of the above eight livelihood classes has been divided into three sub-classes with reference to the economic status as below :—

(i) Self-supporting Persons ;

(ii) Non-earning Dependants ; and

(iii) Earning Dependants.

(i A 'Self-supporting Person' is one who earns an income in cash or kind sufficient at least for his own maintenance.

(ii) A 'Non-earning Dependant' is a person who has no income of his own either in cash or in kind.

(iii) An 'Earning Dependant' is a person who earns a regular (not casual) income not sufficient even for his own maintenance. It includes seasonal income also.

All self-supporting persons are, ordinarily, economically active. But there are certain classes and groups which constitute an exception to this rule. These are mentioned below :—

(i) All self-supporting persons of Agricultural Class IV,

(ii) The following groups of self-supporting persons who are included in Non-Agricultural Class VIII, and derive their principal means of livelihood from miscellaneous sources (otherwise than through economic activity) :—

(a) Non-working owners of non-agricultural property,

(b) Pensioners and remittance holders,

(c) Persons living on charity and other persons with unproductive occupations, and

(d) Inmates of penal institutions and asylums.

Economically active persons engaged in industries and services are classified in economic table B-III into the ten divisions and 88 sub-divisions mentioned above, and are further divided into three sections, namely :—

(i) Employers,

(ii) Employees, and

(iii) Independant Workers.

A person should be treated as an 'Employer' only if he has necessarily to employ any person in order to carry on the business from which he secures his livelihood, provided that employee is regularly employed and derives his Principal Means of Livelihood by such employment. Part-time or casual employment which does not provide the Principal Means of Livelihood of the employee should not be taken into account. A person employing a cook or other servants for domestic services is not an employer.

An 'Employee' is a person who ordinarily works under some other person for a salary or wage in cash or kind, as the means of earning his livelihood. Managers, Superintendents, Agents etc. and all Government servants should be recorded as employees only even though they may have power of employing or appointing subordinate officers or assistants.

An 'Independent Worker' means a person who is not employed by anyone else and who does not employ anybody else in order to earn his livelihood.

The Age (Sample) tables were prepared from the original enumeration slips by taking a ten-per-cent sample in accordance with the following instructions of the Registrar General, India.

The 'D' Series social and cultural tables include Table D-V relating to the displaced persons giving particulars about their arrival into India. Table D-VI gives details of the non-Indian Nationals and Table D-VII is designed to show the distribution of educated man-power among the different livelihood classes.

Important population data for the district and the tahsils have been summarised in Table 'E' which also gives the classification of the people by livelihood classes.

The main Report of the 1951 Census for the States of Assam, Tripura and Manipur will be found in two parts entitled "Census of India 1951—Volume XII—Assam, Manipur and Tripura". Part I contains an analysis of the statistics collected and Part II statistics arranged in different tables for the States, their natural divisions and districts.

In addition to these Volumes there are National Registers of Citizens prepared for every village and ward and maintained in manuscript giving important census details for each person. These registers are preserved as permanent records in the district headquarters.

From the data collected at the Census of the Small-scale Industries, three tables were prepared which are included in the District Census Handbook, giving village or wardwise distribution of small-scale industrial establishments, employment in textile establishments for Census tracts and employment in non-textile establishments for the same tracts.

While the accuracy in respect of the details actually recorded by the Enumerators during the Census of the Small-scale Industries has been reported to be good, the District Officers were of the view that there was tendency towards under-enumeration of the establishments, due to the failure of the enumerating staff to make intensive efforts to discover all establishments within the areas allotted to them. The figures in the tables for the Small-scale Industries should, therefore, be regarded as illustrative of the nature of small industries prevalent in the different parts of the district and should not be relied upon as giving accurate number of specific type of establishments in different localities.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR TABULATION OF VILLAGE NOTES

Important information for every village was separately recorded on printed forms and has been incorporated in columns 3 and 4 of Primary Census Abstract using the symbols given below :—

1. Floods—Write "F" if it is liable to flood of any category.

2. Epidemics—For entries like Cholera, Small-pox, Kala-azar, Malaria, write Ch, Sp, Ka or Mal. For all other epidemics mentioned in this column, enter it in full.

3. Water Supply—

   A. The village has a source of water supply provided by the Government or Local Board.

   B. Natural sources of supply like rivers and bils.

   C. Private supply.

   D. Acute scarcity.

Underlined, it will indicate that quality of drinking water is bad.

4. Medical Facilities—

   (a) The village has a Local Board or Government regular dispensary within 5 miles radius.

   (b) There is no regular dispensary but a Public Health Dispensary within 5 miles radius.

   (c) There is no dispensary but a private qualified doctor within 5 miles radius.

   (d) No medical facilities of any sort.

5. Educational Facilities—

1. Served by a Local Board or Government School within 2 miles radius.
2. Served by a Private Venture School only within 2 miles radius.
3. No educational facilities of any kind (Mission Schools have been generally treated as private schools although in some areas where they get grant-in-aid they have been shown as Government Schools by Enumerators).

CENSUS TRACT—SAMPLE POPULATION AND DISPLACED PERSONS

Census statistics of the urban and rural population can be studied in various ways. The results of such studies in comparing the conditions and characteristics of the urban and rural people in the matter of births, deaths, sex composition, sanitation, levels of living etc., would be of great value in economic planning and development of social welfare work in the State and its different parts.

Each district was, therefore, divided for purposes of the Census into a number of rural and urban tracts according to the size of the population,

Preparatory to the sorting and tabulation of Census information, rural and urban areas of a district were grouped into Census Tracts on the basis of instructions issued by the Registrar General of India. With the approval of the Registrar General of India, the following rural and urban tracts were formed in the case of

Rural

Tract No.

7. North Cachar Hills
35. Mikir Hills (Nowgong)
43. Mikir Hills (Sibsagar)

Urban

15. Haflong Town

In several Tables the term "Sample Population" has been used. This sample was drawn according to the following instruction of the Registrar General of India. Enumeration was done on pads of 100 slips each, a slip containing the record of an individual.

"Break each pad and stack the slips of the pad ; and "cut" the stack as in a card game. Place the lower portion above the upper portion and then deal the slips into the pigeonholes. You should deal the slips into pigeonholes in the order of 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, S, 6, 7, 8 and 9 successively. All the time, you should watch the slips of "Displaced Persons". If you come across any slip of a displaced person deal it in the pigeonhole separately labelled for 'Displaced Persons'. Thus there were three bundles ; (i) General Slips i. e. Slips combined for holes labelled for 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 (ii) Sample Slips i. e. Slips in the hole marked 'S' and (iii) Displaced Persons.

Hence it will be seen that that the sample is not a sample of the total population but of the latter excluding the 'Displaced Population'.

The check factors for the sample population :—

1,000 S/G Rural Total	=	111
1,000 S/G Urban Total	=	111
1,000 S/G District Total	=	111

A "Displaced Person" was defined by the Registrar General of India as follows :—

"A Displaced Person" means any person who has entered India having left or being compelled to leave his or her home in Western Pakistan on or after the 1st March, 1947 or his/her home in Eastern Pakistan on or after the 15th October, 1946 on account of civil disturbances or the fear of such disturbances or on account of the setting up of the two Dominions of India and Pakistan."
