INTRODUCTION

THIS COMPILATION is intended to be a study of the composition and educational attainments of the industrial workers in Calcutta City and the Suburban region. The terms, self-supporting and earning dependants are used in the sense in which these were employed during the last Census but persons deriving their incomes from non-productive sources have been excluded. So also all persons receiving income from agricultural occupations are excluded so that the aggregate figures represent workers engaged in industries and services in the region.

The area covered is about 164 square miles on both sides of the river Hooghly (including Calcutta City) with an average density of 28,214 per square mile. Greatest concentration is in Calcutta City, with 78,858 per square mile. In Howrah City tract, this comes down to 43,537. Excluding these two places, density on both sides of the Ganges is of about the same magnitude i.e., 13,571 on the east (excluding Calcutta City) and 13,373 on the west (excluding Howrah City).

This study is based on a 10 per cent. sample but displaced population are not represented in the sample. The object was to study the pattern after eliminating the effects of the influx of the refugees. On the date of the last Census, displaced population in the region was of the magnitude of 20·4 per cent. of the rest. The displaced population however was not spread equitably over the region. Compared to original population, the increase due to displaced persons was greatest on the East of the Hooghly River (excluding Calcutta City) amounting to 29·2 per cent. In Calcutta City, it was 20·5 per cent., while on the West of the Hooghly River (including Chandernagore), it was 9·9 per cent., the increase being more or less uniform in this last region.

These effects are borne out by Table I below :

Table II (Parts A, B, C and D) below gives a comparative study of the educational attainment of people coming to work in this zone from different parts of India as also of immigrants from East Pakistan. This latter category easily attains the highest score in literacy in all categories of the workers.

Taking male workers first and excluding immigrants from East Pakistan, the proportion of illiterate workers (both self-supporting and earning dependants) is the minimum amongst people of local origin. This also holds good in case of female earning dependants but in case of self-supporting females, the rest of West Bengal shows less illiteracy than Calcutta Industrial Region. This may be explained by the generally conservative habits of our womenfolk and the fact that illiterate adult women from rest of West Bengal may not find it easy to immigrate to these areas and find shelter and means of sustenance.

A study of the educational attainment of male earning dependants would be rather interesting. Of the immigrants from East Pakistan, about 31 per cent. having passed Matriculation or higher examinations cannot earn sufficient to maintain themselves. This includes 6·3 per cent. who are Graduates or have even higher qualifications. To some extent this might be ascribed to the effects of partition of Bengal as the people might have been employed in East Bengal but might have immigrated to India just before Census and taken up whatever employment they could procure. This seems to be actually borne out by experience. A much similar position is noticeable in the case of earning dependants of local origin and those coming from rest of West Bengal. Unless they are students taking up odd jobs to augment family income, they must be the people seeking employment and as such should come under the category of unemployed.

The regional and sex composition of the working people in Calcutta Industrial Region is shown in Table III below. It is interesting to note that for every 100 male workers, there are only 7·8 female workers. But all regions do not contribute women workers in same proportion as their contribution to total working people. Proportionately, West Bengal excluding Calcutta Industrial Region makes the largest contribution—about 15 per hundred male workers. Amongst people of local origin women workers number about 11·5 per hundred males. Proportion of women workers is much lower in other regions.

The industrial classification adopted for the purpose of this brochure is based on the scheme of classification adopted for 1951 Census. This classification is different from the International Classification Scheme. A comparative analysis of the two schemes is to be found in "Census of India 1951, Vol. VI, Part II—Tables" at page 166.

An industrial division will often include common occupations e.g., clerk, accountant, menial servant, unskilled labourer and the like. In some cases however, the industries have been split up into minute divisions which sometimes coincide with actual occupation. Thus under subdivision 7·4 Railway transport, we have 7·42 Railway porters. Whenever classes have so narrowed down that possibility of large scale enterprises and hence mixture of professions and occupations can be ignored, an analysis of the places of birth and educational attainments may reveal important characteristics, about the nature of pursuits of people coming from different parts of the country. Appendix A to this note gives a percentage analysis of the places of birth and educational attainment of workers engaged in each category.

The results given in the Appendix was utilised for 'rank' analysis for ascertaining if there was any correlation between distribution of workers coming from a particular region, and the level of educational attainments of workers in different industries. The 205 categories of industries were ranked according to proportion of the workers contributed by any region. The industries were again ranked according to magnitude of the wrokers who were (i) illiterates, (ii) literates below Matric standard, (iii) above Matric but below degree standard and (iv) above degree standard and the correlation of these rankings with each of the five regions was ascertained. The co-efficient used was Spearman's ρ and the formula employed was :

$$\frac{\frac{1}{6}(n^3-n)-S(d^2)-T'-U'}{\sqrt{\left[\left\{\frac{1}{6}(n^3-n)-2T'\right\}\left\{\frac{1}{6}(n^3-n)-2U'\right\}\right]}}$$

(with usual notations)

The results are given in Table IV below :

N.B.—(i) Calculation based on percentage analysis as given in Appendix A.
(ii) Active workers mean the Self-supporting persons and Earning dependants.
(iii) "Mid-Rank method" followed in cases of 'tie'
(iv) Standard Error of ρ is constant (the value being 0·07003 here).
ρ Varies between + 1 (perfect positive correlation) and — 1 (perfect negative correlation).
(a) Calcutta Industrial Region. (b) All Districts of West Bengal (excluding Calcutta Industrial Region).

Compared to the standard error, the co-efficient is considerably large in many instances and the results must be regarded as significant. Taking the occupations dominated by illiterate workers first, East Pakistsn has the largest negative correlation of the magnitude of 0·546. There is a similarly large negative co-efficient for Calcutta Industrial Region indicating that these regions do not supply much of the illiterate labour force in the region. On the other hand, East India [excluding West Bengal (a) and (b)] has a positive correlation of 0·607, indicating that immigrants from this region dominate the industries where the workers are mostly illiterate. Study of all the columns will reveal similar significant characteristics. Broadly speaking, both East Pakistan and West Bengal excluding Calcutta Industrial Region start with negative correlation with illiteracy, but correlation increases for each higher degree of education. Calcutta Industrial Region also shows similar trend, but correlation here above degree is lower than for below degree standard.

East India [excluding West Bengal (a) and (b)] has got negative correlation in all cases, except as indicated earlier, in case of illiterates. Others (including territories outside India) shows slightly positive correlation above degree standard but very high negative correlation for literates below Matric and a small negative correlation below degree.

In this study, Calcutta Industrial Region is split up into three regional divisions viz., (1) Clacutta City, (2) Regions East of the Hooghly River (excluding Calcutta City) and (3) Regions West of the Hooghly River. The working people in each of these three regions are classified into self-supporting persons and earning dependants. Thus there are two tables for each region and two tables for the combined population of the whole of Calcutta Industrial Region. Details of the areas included under each region is given in Appendix C.

NOTE

The tables in this Volume are intended to recognise a fact, which is that the Calcutta Industrial Region on the Hooghlyside is one demographic unit. This has been hinted at in 1921, 31 and 41 but never expressly avowed. The area treated in this Volume represents the extent of conurbation of Calcutta City. It has a certain demographic, economic, industrial and geographical unity the study of which will be facilitated by the way census statistics have been presented in this part of the Report for West Bengal, Sikkim and Chandernagore. All areas here considered are urban and study of the interstitial spaces between the administrative boundaries in which the towns and cities are located and the urban areas themselves can be undertaken with the help of Census of India Vol. VI. Part II—Tables for West Bengal, Sikkim and Chandernagore and the District Handbooks for Hooghly, Howrah and 24-Parganas. The Report for Calcutta city proper will be available in Part III of Census of India Volume VI, shortly to be published.
